

Blindness from multiple cerebral gliomas mimicking metastatic brain disease

immediate access to the latest key research articles

Authors: A. Abou-Zeid ^a; D. Duplessis ^a; K. K. Gnanalingham ^a

Affiliation: ^a Department of Neurosurgery, Greater Manchester Neurosciences Centre, Salford Royal Hospital, Manchester, UK

DOI: 10.1080/02688690802233372

Publication Frequency: 6 issues per year

Published in:  British Journal of Neurosurgery

First Published on: 05 August 2008

Subject: Neurosurgery;

Formats available: HTML (English) : PDF (English)

Abstract

Multiple brain lesions are usually due to metastatic spread. The authors describe an unusual case of a 56-year-old male presenting with visual loss secondary to multiple intracranial lesions, with infiltration of the optic chiasm and an incidental renal lesion. Open biopsy of the brain lesion confirmed glioblastoma multiforme.

Keywords: Glioma; multiple; optic chiasm

Bookmark with:  CiteULike  Del.icio.us  BibSonomy  Connotea
More bookmarks 