

Fourth ventricle ependymoma in father and son

Click here for immediate access to the latest key research articles

Authors: H. Lord <sup>a</sup>; J. Ironside <sup>b</sup>; D. Summers <sup>c</sup>; A. Gregor <sup>a</sup>; S. Erridge <sup>a</sup>; L. Myles <sup>d</sup>

Affiliations: <sup>a</sup> Department of Clinical Oncology, Edinburgh Cancer Centre,

<sup>b</sup> Division of Pathology, School of Molecular and Clinical Medicine,

<sup>c</sup> Department of Neuroradiology,

<sup>d</sup> Department of Neurosurgery, Western General Hospital, Edinburgh, UK

DOI: 10.1080/02688690701697669

Publication Frequency: 6 issues per year

Published in:  British Journal of Neurosurgery, Volume 22, Issue 3 June 2008 , pages 423 - 425

First Published on: 10 October 2007

Subject: Neurosurgery;

Formats available: HTML (English) : PDF (English)

Abstract

A father and son presented ten years apart with a fourth ventricle ependymoma. The history, imaging and pathology are presented and the aetiology of familial ependymoma discussed.

Keywords: Brain tumours; ependymoma; familial tumours; fourth ventricle

Bookmark with:  CiteULike  Del.icio.us  BibSonomy  Connotea  More bookmarks 